

In my opinion, everyone should attend college in order to succeed in life. Going to college can teach me life lessons, give me a higher earning potential, help me to get better jobs and job benefits, and help me to be satisfied with future jobs. When I am older, I want to enjoy my job, and not be miserable every day when I go to work. Attending college could help me to ensure that my job will align with interests that would lead me to satisfaction, and that will prevent me being miserable every single day. Another reason that I want to attend college is because I love interacting with people. I know that I can, and will make tons of friends at school. When I join college, I am hoping to live in a dorm. Hopefully, this will give me a peak of how my future will look, which is living independently without my parents. College could help me with better communication skills, building relationships, personal interest exploration, and other things that can lead me to success in life. College can lead me to a greater direction, opening doors that I never imagined happening. Ever since I was younger, I have known I wanted to attend college, and when I do, I will be achieving my personal goals, making me feel confident. I know that I want to start going to college right after I graduate high-school. My dad didn't finish college until after he already had a job and kids. I remember always seeing him stressed out, having to work all day and then come home and work on college work, but he still had to make time for us. I don't want to be stressed all of the time, so I am going to try to attend college as soon as possible. College is a memorable part of life, and I don't want to miss out on those memories. When I am older and have a family of my own, I don't want my kids to have to worry about when they are going to have their next meal, or if they are going to be able to go to college themselves! I know that attending college will get me a job that I get a high salary range from, in order for me to provide for my family. These are all reasons why I am going to attend college.
